

OH, GIRLS! FRED KERNOCHAN VOWS HE'LL NEVER WED!

Magistrate, Who Is a Society Leader, Says Boldly So From the Bench.

HEARS OF MUCH WOE.

Tells Woman Who Had Husband Arrested He Will Stand Out Unflinchingly.

Magistrate "Fred" Kernochan, who is considered a most eligible young man by the mammas - with daughters - to marry in the most exclusive circles of New York society, put himself on record to-day as a perpetual bachelor.

He made this declaration after hearing both sides of the marital woes of the Flippen Lomax. Flippen Lomax is twenty-four and has been employed as a clerk in the Clearing-House for several years. At the age of eighteen he married and the six years that have passed since have not been years of marital bliss.

Suing for Separation.

His wife is suing him for separation, but he has continued to live in the same flat with her, his mother-in-law and two children and a maid, at No. 607 West One Hundred and Eighty-third street. This morning his wife had him arrested and charged that he slapped her in the face and dragged her out of bed.

Mrs. Flippen Lomax, her two little children, her mother and her maid were in the Harlem Police Court to press the charge. They declared that young Mr. Lomax came home at A. M., acted boisterously, and attacked Mrs. Lomax, spanking her in the presence of the maid.

This the young husband denied. He declared that the basis of all his marital woes was his mother-in-law. Her indignance had set his wife against him. When he got home this morning he was locked out. Repeated ringings failed to open the door of his flat. When his patience was exhausted he kicked in the door. All the family thereupon greeted him with a cold "Good morning." This had angered him, but he went to bed and asleep.

"While I slept," he said, "my wife extracted $48 from my coat pocket."

"That is not true," cried Mrs. Lomax. "There was only $22."

Then Mrs. Lomax appealed to the Court to send her husband to jail. She thought his crimes deserved a life sentence.

Takes Bachelor's Vow.

"I appeal to you as a married man," cried the pretty young woman. "I am not a married man," replied Magistrate Kernochan. "I intend never to marry. Marriage has no allurements for me. I see too much of its results, as in this case before me. Therefore I have determined never to marry, and will stick to my bachelorhood. I am not a married man, but I am a married man in the eyes of the law. I must discharge the defendant, as it is manifest that he has been tenderly received in his home. When a man has to break in the door of his house to obtain shelter, he is certainly not in a happy state."

REAR-ADMIRAL COGHILAN DIES VERY SUDDENLY.

A complaint that one of the German ships had been stopped during the strict blockade following the fight.

"Tell your Admiral those ships will stop when I say so," said "Fighting Joe."

"But they fly the German flag!" protested the English.

"You can buy those flags at a dollar a yard anywhere," said Coghilan. "A yard of German flag costs the same as a yard of English flag. Tell your Admiral that the slightest infraction of the rules will mean just one thing, and that one thing is war."

There was a big dramatic to-do, but the German admiral, who was in the League Club in New York, at which Bill Root, then president of the club, presided, the English admiral, and the two boys, were struck with heart disease.

The story looked out, and for a time it looked as if there might be international complications.

The Kaiser himself calmed the rising storm by letting it be known at Washington that he had read and laughed at the verses and Coghilan was not even reprimanded for his indiscretion. Up to very lately he was in great demand at public dinners, being regarded as the best after-dinner speaker in the navy.

In October, 1908, he married Miss Julia Harbour, of Terre Haute, Ind. He is survived by his widow and one son, Graham Coghilan.

TRANS-ATLANTIC AFFINITY MEETS NEMESIS ON PIER

Devoted Couple End Voyage of Bliss Against Irate Wife in Hoboken.

An affinity that budded on the other side and blossomed during the voyage was nipped by a killing frost to-day when the North German Lloyd liner Main arrived. Among the first cabin passengers were Leopold Dutka, a dapper little man, with flowing yellow hair, and Miss Vera Goryznska, a pretty young woman of twenty, both claiming to hail from the town of Wadewitz, in the province of Galicia, Austria.

Through the trip the couple were marked in their devotion to each other, and to-day as the ship was coming up the bay the young woman let it be known that they were engaged and expected to marry as soon as they landed.

But they didn't land, and they probably never will. On the pier was a tall, determined looking woman of middle age—Mrs. Leopold Dutka. She had with her an older woman and a lawyer, Adam K. Strickler, who has offices at No. 37 Wall street.

Backed Off the Gangplank. The lawyer had communicated with Commissioner of Immigration Watchorn, and as Dutka and dashing Miss Vera started down the gangplank, followed by the shocked congratulations of fellow passengers, Inspector Biglin barred the way and turned them back into the cabin.

Mrs. Dutka traced him to Europe. A Biglin feared she might become violent, but Lawyer Strickler spoke for her.

"My client," he said, "has been in this country seventeen years. About three months ago she met this chap here and they were married. In a few days he borrowed $200 of her, pretending he needed it in securing an inheritance in the old country, and disappeared."

Mrs. Dutka traced him to Europe. A few days ago she got a letter from this girl saying that by every law of love she and not the wife was entitled to the man's affection, and that as soon as he could get a divorce they would be legally united. Mrs. Dutka learned they were on this ship.

"She wants them deported as undesirable aliens. The man is a pauper and we have also learned that some years ago he killed a woman. The killing is said to have been accidental, but in Austria that constitutes a crime, nevertheless."

Man's Escape Foiled. Dutka took advantage of a diversion to dart out of the cabin and make for the side of the ship and cast the pier. Biglin quickly had him by the collar, and he came back wearing handcuffs.

About the same time the girl's uncle, John Giersberg, of No. 336 Hicks street, Brooklyn, appeared. He had received a letter from the niece, whom he had never seen, saying she would arrive to-day with her husband, and asking him to meet her. Being informed of the real case, Giersberg departed.

The pair were sent to Ellis Island as prisoners, with the girl weeping and the man trying to comfort her. Mrs. Dutka, who had kept one hand in her muff all the time, departed after insisting if it would be possible for her to see the pair just a minute or two.

COUNTRESS ELOPES WITH UNTITLED MAN

Weds William R. Nedella, Who Brings Her to This Country.

William R. Nedella and his wife, who was the Countess Stibenth, of Budapest, were passengers on the Cunard liner Lucania, which arrived to-day from Liverpool. They are on a wedding journey, and Nedella is an interesting story of their romance.

Nedella, who is about twenty-four years old, was a steel expert in Vienna. Four years ago he went on business to the southern part of Austria, where he met the Countess and they became secretly engaged. The girl's mother disapproved the young man, as it was the desire of the parents of the girl that she marry one of the nobility.

A few months ago the young people finally announced their engagement and the parents of the girl were furious. Forgiveness was not given the girl, and Nedella decided to come to this country to start life here anew. They are going to California.

FAST LIMITED BLOCKED.

Twentieth Century Delayed Six Hours by Lake Shore Mishap.

(CLEVELAND, Dec. 5.—Traffic on the Lake Shore Road was completely blocked and train schedules deranged for the greater part of the night by a peculiar accident near Toledo. A big freight engine was derailed and turned over on its side. A wrecking train with derricks soon arrived. As the big locomotive was hoisted into the air preparatory to being replaced upon the track the cables snapping and the engine crashed to the ground.

It fell across both tracks in such a manner as to block traffic both east and west for hours. The eastbound Twentieth Century Limited was delayed six hours. Other limited trains were delayed from one to four hours.

STAYS IN PRISON TO SAVE DYING FATHER A SHOCK

Pittsburg Man Falsely Accused Feared Knowledge of Arrest Would Kill Parent.

(Special to The Evening World.) PITTSBURG, Dec. 5.—Samuel C. Young, aged sixty-one, a deputy sheriff of Allegheny County, died early to-day at his home, No. 415 North avenue, Millvale. His death brought to light the story of the self-sacrifice of his son Curtis R. Young, who spent fifty-four days in jail in Trenton, N. J., on a charge of which he was innocent, rather than let the news of his imprisonment reach the bedside of his dying father, lest it should prove fatal to him.

Curtis Young, who was a salesman for a Pittsburg concern, was arrested in Trenton in September during the Trenton Fair on a charge of stealing and shooting in a gambling scheme. He had no friends in the Jersey capital to put up the necessary bond to secure his release. Because of the condition of his father, he chose the jail term rather than subject his family to the shame and thus make his plight known to the dying man.

On Nov. 25 Young was brought before the Grand Jury, when it was proved that he had permitted the gambler to have a full license in his room without being aware of the contents, and the young salesman was released from custody on his own bond, reaching there before his father died.

While in the Trenton Jail Young won the regard of his jailors, who suspected that he belonged to a good family. Young, however, refused to give his name or that of his father, and from the time of his arrest until his release he had no news of his aged parent's condition.

Young is now trying to learn whether he can proceed against the New Jersey police for false arrest.

ROOSEVELT AFTER THE ANACONDA COPPER CO.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—After a hearing at the White House to-day, at which the representatives of the Anaconda Copper Company presented their side of the controversy over the destruction of the forests and vegetation at Anaconda, against which the farmers have complained to him, President Roosevelt declared that the only patience he would exercise in restraining the Department of Justice from proceeding with an injunction suit against the copper company would be to make an investigation to ascertain whether a practical method is possible for the extraction from the mines of the poisonous substances which are now doing great damage.

The President will send an expert to Ducktown, Tenn., to investigate several matters there, on which it is claimed against the company, and to extract the sulphur and arsenic from the fumes at a profit. If this investigation proves the practicability of the appliances, which were placed on the smelters after a decision by the Supreme Court obtained by the State of Georgia against the company, the President will order the Department of Justice to proceed with an injunction suit.
